[From "Newark the City of Industry," issued under the auspices of the Board of Trade.]

NEWARK—HISTORICAL.

Newark was founded in 1666. Its history is divided by a student of it into three distinct periods. First there was the narrow, straight-laced puritanical village from 1666 to 1700; next, the thriving factory town which rapidly developed into an industrial city of world-wide fame, and now comes the "epoch of wonderful change, the era of the great Newark with well-nigh boundless possibilities for material, intellectual and moral expansion."

Until 1800 the increase in Newark's population was slow. In 1790 it was about 1,200. Ten years later it had gained but little, but a quarter century after that when it was "humming with industry" its inhabitants numbered 8,000. Slowly at first and then with an ever-increasing steadiness and swiftness the city began to grow, not only in population, but in industrial importance and public and private wealth.

It is shown by official figures that during the ten years ending with 1910 the population increased 41.2 per cent. as compared with an increase of 35.3 per cent. for the previous decade and 33.2 per cent. for the ten-year period ending with 1890. In 1860 the population was 71,941. Fifty years later it was 347,469. That was at the annual rate of 7.66 per cent. In the last twenty-five years the increase in the population has been 127.12 per cent. Assuming that the future growth in population will be in the same proportion, the total in 1935 is estimated at 800,000.

As the population has increased the industries of the city have grown. This growth has not been confined to any one class. It has been so varied that Newark to-day has probably a greater number of diversified industries than any other city in the country. These statements are not mere assertions. They are facts. It is easily possible to verify them not only by a visit to the city but by the records of the Board of Trade and the official figures of the government census bureau.

What those reports will not show is the manner of the city's growth. In the last half century and particularly in the past decade the city has prospered exceedingly and spread in all directions. Handsome public buildings have taken the place of the old structures; modern, well-lighted factories, equipped with up-to-date machinery, now hum in the industrial centres where not long ago there were vacant lots or rambling structures with antiquated equipment; imposing apartment houses have sprung up in grandeur where squatters once lived in tumble-down shacks; palatial residences and one and two family houses of varying size and cost are everywhere to be seen; mile after mile of city streets have been paved and sewered and lined with trees; churches have grown in number and size; amusement places have sprung up on all sides; bank deposits have increased enormously and wherever one looks are to be seen unmistakable evidences of growth and prosperity.

With the amazing growth of Newark its population like its industries and the output of its manufactured articles has become more varied. Its population is distinctly cosmopolitan. Here the natives of every country under the sun have found and are finding a congenial home. Here, too, they are finding employment to their liking and here, also, they and the native-born residents are building up bank accounts. Through the building and loan associations which have steadily grown in size, number and resources, not a few of the residents of the city have added to their own comfort and to the taxable value of the property in the municipality by building their own homes. These residences are, for the most part, model dwelling places and in the building of them the city has spread to the north, east, west and south with almost magical rapidity.

Its growing cosmopolitan character has made and is making Newark a veritable "city of all nations." Here the foreigner at once meets men, women and children from his native place. That this is so is indicated by a recent school census. Those figures show that in the public schools there were 17,329 American white children; 1,172 American negroes; 9,166 Hebrews; 6,513 Germans; 5,498 Italians; 1,417 English; 827 Irish; 483 Scotch; 277 Polish; 257 Magyar; 226 Russian; 202 Swedish; 199 French; 171 Canadian; 135 Slovak and a fairly large representation of more than a score of other nationalities, including Chinese, Japanese, Javanese, Finnish, Guavian, Syrian, Turks, Greeks, Egyptians and American-Indian pupils.

With a varied population of this kind and the amazingly rapid growth of the city in all directions and in all fields of human endeavor—a growth that long ago outstripped the normal increase in the police department—the city is at all times orderly and peaceful. Serious disturbances and grave breaches of the peace are things unknown in the life of the municipality.

"Newark," says a recognized authority and writer on the city, "has entered upon its third epoch, and the future has in store for it growth and prosperity the like of which past generations would not have so much as dreamed, and of which we ourselves have but the faintest comprehensions."

NEWARK TO-DAY is the metropolis of the State of New Jersey, and ranks fourteenth in population in the list of municipalities in the United States, the census taken in 1910 giving the number of inhabitants as 347,469. It covers an area of 23.40 square miles, of which 6.48 square miles is undeveloped meadow land.

It is particularly noted for its manufactories and, in this respect, ranks eleventh in the aggregate value of output, in the United States.

Few, if any, communities of equal size approach it in value, variety and volume of product. Although manufacturing is its distinctive note, it is also a great insurance and financial centre.

Newark has made gigantic strides in all things which pertain to the welfare of its inhabitants, and occupies a high position among the great cities of this country in the educational, industrial and other fields.

Its educational facilities are unexcelled; the number and diversity of its industries afford steady and remunerative employment.

The death rate ranks low among the municipalities of its size in the United States.

It is liberal in providing for the moral and social welfare of its citizens.
